BULPEN BULLETINS

The New Universe, Part II

Last month I gave you a glimpse of the first two New Universe titles, Star Brand and Spitfire, and the Trouble Shooters. This month, as promised, a peek at the rest of the line!

Psi-Force

One is a psychic healer.
One can project his astral self.
One is a telepath.
One is telekinetic.
One can use psionic powers to explode things.

Divided, they're vulnerable to exploitation—by individuals, by organizations, by governments.

United they can mindmeld and create a single being who possesses all of their paranormal abilities. United they're invincible.

Kickers, Inc.

Jack Magnificante, the highest paid professional athlete in the world, perhaps the most gifted physical specimen ever to wear a football uniform, has a problem. Yesterday, suddenly, by means he doesn't understand, he became much stronger, much faster than before. It cost him the life of his brother. It will change his life forever. And that's just the beginning.

D.P. 7

They are strange.
They are horrifying.
They are constantly ridiculed.

They are seven people, out of place in the world.

Seven people afraid of what they are, afraid of what might become of them. Seven of the most dangerous beings ever to walk the face of the earth.

Nightmask

He's Keith Remsen.

She's his sister, Teddy.

Together they run a unique psychoanalytical consulting service. With Teddy's help, Keith can enter the dreams of others, roam the labyrinths of their minds and, in the process, help the seriously disturbed. Keith remains anonymous in their clients' dreams, however. Protected from their psychological defenses by a psychophysically manifested camouflage. It's called the Nightmask.

Justice

He was a warrior. A law officer in his own world. He has the awesome power to destroy, to shield, to protect and to read the true nature of a man by his aura. How he came to the place he cannot remember. But this he knows—the good must be protected and the evil must be exterminated. He is Justice.

Merc

Combat. It is what he does best. He's Mark Hazard, a Vietnam veteran who has gone on to become a soldier of fortune, selling his fighting abilities to military causes he believes in—or, at least, can live with. It has cost him, though. Cost him his wife. His son. The love of his parents. The other mercs are Mark's only family now. But what choice does he have? Combat is what Mark Hazard does best.

Ever Wish...

...you'd been collecting comics in 1961 so you could have picked up Fantastic Four #1, and all those other now-rare early Marvel issues? Well, don't miss the chance to get in on the ground floor of the New Universe, then. Another chance like this probably won't come along for another twenty-five years.

Universe News...

...is the name of the special Bulpenn-type news and information column making its debut in New Universe first issues. The initial column explains exactly what the big differences are between the New Universe and all other comics. Don't miss it!

Strive on!

VIEW FROM THE TENTH FLOOR

The car was defective. A real lemon. Alisha was crushed. This was the greatest trauma in the five-year history of her life. The car, a 1/26 scale model Corvette designed to ride two Barbie dolls over to Kani's place, had a defective part. I couldn't finish assembling it. The tears welled up in my young cousin's eyes.

We arrived at the toy store, a modest place in Nashville's Hundred Oaks shopping mall, and were greeted by Sherry Stone, one of the sales clerks.

"We want a new car."

"Why should I give you one?"

"This one's broken."

"How do I know you didn't break it?"

"Do I look like I play with toy cars?"

"You want me to answer that?"

"Do I get my car or what?"

"We're out of stock. You'll have to get something else."

There's a tug at my jacket. It's Alisha pointing up at a mountain of Barbie Doll Vettes piled on top of a high shelf. The kid has radar.

"Okay, I'll exchange it."

It took Sherry ten minutes to fill out the proper paperwork. In that time, Alisha managed to convince me to buy her a new Barbie doll. I went looking for the MARVEL SECRET WARS collection. They were sold out. Our toys sell like our comics. God bless America. Still, I really wanted a Hobgoblin doll. Oh, well.

"Y'all come back, y'hear?"

There's a moral here somewhere. I dare you to find it.

—James C. Owsley

P.S. Got a letter from Sherry the other day. She ain't such a bad kid.

Dear Marveldom,
AMAZING SPIDER-MAN #277 ... WONDERFUL! Ever since I read DAREDEVIL #227, I have been patiently waiting for Spidey to discover Matt Murdock's plight and lend a hand. Their two personalities complement each other so well. I just love to see them in action together.

So do we, Paula!

Spider-guys:
I am a 22 year old, fifth year college senior majoring in applied math and theoretical computers (which is just academic-speak for computer science, but it has a much more impressive effect on the little old ladies on the bus who insist on showing me pictures of their grandchildren). Until last June, I never looked at a comic book. Nay, I scoffed at them. I looked upon them with disgust, disdain, and disapproving stares (some alliteration there, huh?). Mindless trash beneath my notice. Then I read a few while at a friend's house. So I was wrong. I apologize. Creative genius at its best. I am hooked. You guys also helped me give up smoking. Instead of having a cigarette between classes, I now read one of your excellent titles. Thanks.

Welcome aboard, Tom! Got any other bad habits you'd like cured?

Dear Ludes at Marvel,
Lately you've been making me think that Spider-Man is going insane. If he is, he might as well make something out of it. For instance, in issue #277, he and the Kingpin were alone in the KP's office. Why didn't Spidey waste him? No one could have stopped Spidey from killing him, and it would have been a real boost to the web-slinger's confidence.

Er, Danny, are you absolutely sure that Spidey's the guy who's going insane—

Dear Web-Weavers,
I've noticed that not many of Spidey's true believers are female like me. I don't understand this since Spidey's got a lot of sex appeal.

Do you think he's got enough to make Playgirl Magazine's "Top 50 Most Eligible Bachelors in America"? ... like a certain tall, well-known Editor-in-Chief?

Dear Jim & Adam,
The conversation/confrontation between Spidey and the Kingpin in issue #277 has both characters referring to "Daredevil's" current misfortunes. Insofar as anyone knows, Daredevil has simply dropped out of sight, his alter-ego Matt Murdock has been put through the wringer! Spidey's slip of the tongue (Pg. 7 Panel 7) and the Kingpin's subsequent one (Pg. 8 Panel 1) blatantly exposes both characters' knowledge of Matt Murdock's secret identity and in the process incriminates Kingpin in those events.

I can only assume (No-Prize time!) Spidey failed to notice this because he was still getting over the shock of seeing Matt Murdock's present condition and was relieved to discover that the Kingpin had no knowledge of Spidey's secret identity.

Good assumption, P.J.!

Dear Jim,
In a recent letter column, Jim Puga said that Spidey's frictionless substance couldn't stick to his costume. One easy answer to that would be that the substance couldn't be frictionless, since that's physically impossible, although it could come pretty close. Spidey could be exaggerating, or mistaken. But I don't do easy answers. So, in order to be a substance, it must be able to form chemical bonds with itself, at least. Under certain conditions, like in intense heat, it might bond with other substances as well, such as the fibre in Spidey's costume. It could have been galvanized or vulcanized on. Or the substance in liquid form could seep into the costume and set around the fibres. As for Spidey's turning and turning corners, his shoes cannot be entirely coated with the substance. There must be a frictionful band around the soles' edges, so he can stop, kick off or turn like a skater. The frictionless areas are probably thicker, so that the friction areas don't interfere with sliding. Can you grasp all that?

Yeah, sure, whatever you say, David!

Dear Editor,
In issue #275, Hobgoblin's chest plate was blue. In issue #276, it was red. I think that's because at the precise instant Hobgoblin hit Spider-Man with his computerized barrage, the plate turned red to indicate that its internal energy supply was getting low. That's also why Hobgoblin didn't use the barrage very much during issue #276. He was conserving energy!

Is that explanation worth a No-Prize?

It sure is, Chris!

Dear Spider-guys:
In issue #277 during Spidey's confrontation with the Kingpin, the Kingpin thinks to himself that he could flood the room with the red mean within seconds. Oh, contraire! As you will recall, a page ago our hero webbed the door shut. This could be disaster if word of this ever got out, right? Wrong! You had an explanation planned all the time. Upon an emergency signal from the Kingpin, his men would come in through the secret emergency exit, thereby surprising whoever or whatever caused the Kingpin's distress, right?

Er... Right you are, Jason!

Dear Editor:
I know who the Rose is. He is the Schemer, the Kingpin's son.

Dear Spider-people,
I have only one question: In issue #277, page 3, panel 1, Peter's phone is on the far left-hand side of his desk, but in panel two, the phone has moved to the right side. I have a possible solution to clear it up. The phone was bought from Doctor Strange, who enchanted it to move to the person who was going to answer it.

Sound okay?
